The in vitro infection of rat skeletal muscle origin monolayers by virulent strain of the measles virus (strain 3CVI) resulted in preferential binding of the virus to myoblast-bearing monolayers when compared to fibroblast-bearing monolayers. Following binding of the virus to the myoblast-bearing monolayers the cells were highly permissive to viral replication, whereas fibroblast-bearing monolayers were refractory to viral replication. Virus binding was temperature-dependent; binding was optimal at 39 degrees C whereas viral RNA synthesis was optimal at 41 degrees C. Binding of measles virus to myoblast-bearing monolayers was insensitive to chloramphenicol which indicated that viral RNA synthesis was not required for viral attachment to myoblast-bearing monolayers. Uptake of virus by myoblast-bearing monolayers was inhibited by the addition of EGTA, suramin and by acid treatment of the cell monolayers.# Import Modules # Set your autocommit true to get uncommitted updates CREATE TABLE db_name.t1 (f1 INTEGER, f2 INTEGER); CREATE TABLE db_name.t2 (f1 INTEGER, f2 INTEGER); # Start MySQL and import the initial schema /usr/local/mysql/bin/mysql --local-infile=1 -u root --password='root' -e "LOAD DATA LOCAL INFILE '/usr/local/mysql/data/t1.dat' INTO TABLE db_name.t1" # Stop MySQL and import the initial schema /usr/local/mysql/bin/mysql --local-infile=1 -u root --password='root' -e "STOP SQL_SAFE_UPDATES" /usr/local/mysql/bin/mysql --defaults-extra-file=/usr/local/mysql/data/mysql-extra-tables.cnf -e "START SQL_SAFE_UPDATES" # Import 570a42141b
