"“You’re all alone? In this world? In a world so vast? God, don’t tell me this is the end of humanity. Don’t tell me man’s triumph means nothing. Here, here on the edge of this world is where I want to live. I want to live and die among the stars!”" "As a JRPG and a high action RPG, Final Heir absolutely nails it. Its blend of meticulously crafted battle systems and strategically intriguing leveling system allows you to just take in the spellbinding story while watching as your party of powerful characters grow through experience" "Gameplay: The best part of Final Heir is the combat. Each character has their own unique moves, all of which you can customize to your own liking with tons of equipment and up to 200 separate combinations of skills. The combat is incredibly fluid and the unique combat moves really give you a sense of how much depth was put into the experience." "While Final Heir by Keep on Dream's is a Japanese-themed game set in a fantasy world, the game itself is not part of a Japanese publishing company's roster, or even a Japanese publisher. It's a crossover game developed by a North American company, Keep on Dream's, on a Brazilian site, Gamezebo. This may be a first for us here at Infinity Ward, but it's our first time encountering a professionally made American JRPG. And, boy, can this be a fun game." (Source: bff6bb2d33
