Enypnion is a point & click adventure game set in a surreal world. Play as the main character, Jonathan, a young boy who will embark on an adventurous journey. You must solve puzzles and find objects to discover how Jonathan's world and his journey will be. We are currently in the final stages of development. The game will be available for PC and Mac computers (Mac version expected Q2 2013). The game will be released as a digital download on desktop and mobile platforms (e.g. iTunes, Google Play). If you want to learn more about the project, take a look at the screenshots section. If you are interested in sponsoring the game, then take a look at the Sponsorship section on our website.

Simon Darby Simon Darby (born 6 April 1978) is a former Australian rules footballer who played for Essendon in the Australian Football League (AFL). Drafted from the North Perth Football Club in the West Australian Football League (WAFL), Darby was the second choice ruckman in the 1997 AFL Draft, chosen with the fifth selection, to Essendon. He made his senior debut in round five, 1998, and spent the following three seasons as a back-up to the highly talented Michael Long. Long was the Essendon captain in 1999 and Darby played alongside him for the first three games, before being dropped for the next five matches. Darby was elevated to a regular position in the Essendon line-up in 2001 and took time to adjust to the pace of the AFL. He was delisted at the end of the 2004 season but was re-drafted in 2006 as a replacement for the retiring Simon Madden. Darby, Madden and Steven Morrissey all played together for Essendon in the 2007 season, but it was a nightmare year for Darby as he was injured and at times had no ruck partner. He was delisted at the end of the year. Darby was redrafted by Essendon in 2008. He played the first seven games of the 2008 AFL season, but was then delisted again. After the 2008 season, Darby was appointed head of club development for the WAFL club St Mary's, but after just nine months in the role, resigned from his post. References External links

What's new in Realm Of The Mad God Exalt Pack:

Pack The PRR X23 boxcar wagon pack add-on set is based on the PRR model commonly referred to as the "Notch" model. The new way to build the notched bodied road trains of today! Using the exterior pattern as a guide, this kit is assembled in two halves. The left half of the kit is then attached to the right side to create the finishing detail. Please note that this kit is not compatible with the boxcar kit. This part of the build sells separately. A collectable model train that will last the lifetime of your home! There is much more to this model than meets the eye as there are more than 10 hidden tracks on the go along with secret internal engine room/engine scene. Display great static & dynamic poses, and remote controlled operation. Realistic 2D & 3D printed components give a "wow" factor to this toy and a chance to learn & practice LEGO® building. Has over 2200 pcs in package! More than anything, the set is definitely a "collectable", and like a good collector, experience with LEGO bricks goes a long way in this build, especially with the skill of the customizer. This model is highly detailed but not in the least cute... Although you may appreciate its impressive size, the model's brick detail is relatively simple, albeit the 2D print.

The Jedi Academy, the most prestigious school of the Jedi Order, is holding a contest to find the best trainer for Anakin Skywalker, the new Padawan learner. The great task of training a Jedi requires mastery of more than magic, fighting and the Force, it also requires knowledge of many fields: from building lightsabers to healing wounds. Your task will be much more complex than others, as the champion will be chosen by a series of tests, in which you will have to carefully manage the life, health and combat powers of your student. It is a known technique to tune an atomic frequency standard (AFS) to a particular hyperfine transition in an atomic vapor. The AFS is part of a feedback resonator system with a laser and a microwave signal source for providing a modulation source and a clock signal for the AFS. The laser, which is typically a continuous wave (CW) laser, is tuned to the resonant frequency of a selected atomic transition, and the microwave source drives the AFS at the laser frequency, thereby locking the AFS to the selected atomic transition. When operating as an ultra-narrow band frequency reference source, for example, at 10 MHz or less, the system is adversely affected by drift in the laser and microwave sources, which can result in an unacceptably large frequency deviation. Thus, there is a need for an AFS having improved stability in the operating frequency.

Efficacy and safety of mebeverine and 5% lidocaine in comparison with buccal infiltration anesthesia in electro-hysteroscopy. Thirty-seven women with uterine myoma were enrolled into the study. The patients were randomly divided into three groups, one of which, in addition to the local anesthesia provided by the mebeverine solution, underwent electro-hysteroscopy with the use of 4% lidocaine (10 mL) and a bipolar electrode. The other two groups underwent the same intervention with mebeverine only (20 mg per nostril) and buccal infiltration anesthesia (4% lidocaine 5 mL). The patients were questioned regarding the extent of pain experienced during the procedure and the degree of satisfaction with the intervention. Pain evaluation showed no significant differences in the three groups. Patients who received mebeverine only showed the greatest rate of satisfaction, but the mebeverine group demonstrated significantly fewer side effects, such as headache, dizziness, nausea, vomiting, and dry mouth, than those who received buccal infiltration
