Side Quest: Best Trainers: Back with the trainer, the two best finalists in my first Galathea Challenge. In this year, we are going to have a new challenge: find out if our trainers are going to be the best on the planet. Crazy Train: The Queen's Got a New Train: Whatever people say about riding the Crazy Train, they are absolutely wrong. This train is insane! Are you brave enough to ride? It is that, when a Pokémon battles against another Pokémon, that it will activate special abilities, such as the Pokémon that possesses the Ability Water, moving up when the Pokémon that has the Ability Rock touches it and so on. Be careful of what you think, because it is what you believe that determines your success. Anime Fans rejoice! The sequel to the glorious Card Game The Wizard and The Princess is now available for you to play! With 40 playable decks, and the promise of three more in the expansion next year, this game brings a magical experience to players of any kind, who wish to enjoy a much more light-hearted approach to playing card games! Note: The game is free to download and play, but if you want to support its development you can pay with real money through Steam. Doing so unlocks additional features. Pay with your Gold: In a social space, there is always a great risk of "the war of the Gold," an unfortunate situation that occurs when one player in a group of friends prefers not to pay a subscription to play, so their friend has to play for a week and then lose interest. Wouldn't it be much more fun to play a game together without this imbalance? Sure, yes, a game where both players pay and then one of them becomes richer. Prepare yourself for the battle between one true champion and a whole bunch of clones! The goal of this game is to figure out which of the clones is the real one. To find the champion, you need to open the magic box and put all the characters that appears in front of the player in the correct order. Then, a TV will appear. This is where you get to put the real one. At this point, the game will start its levels of the different characters. You need to win all of them and then return to the box to get the right order of the characters to compare with those in the TV. In this game, there is not only a minimum and maximum number of competitors, but also a variety of objectives. Be sure to check out this new challenge for you today

What's new:

Welcome to the third edition of our Moderns series. We hope that these articles will help you to grasp the depth of the format, and also allow you to apply the foundations of the format to your different types of strategies. As this is the third of three Moderns articles, I thought we could start by looking at a particular strategy in the Modern format: the Lockbox. We know that RUG decks use the lockbox very well, and there are ways to counter the deck in response. But there are other decks out there that can use the lockbox to great effect, so let's examine and get a look at how it actually works. Lockbox vs Grixis Delver We first have to rule out one deck that already uses the lockbox as its staple: Elves. These are the Jack Goldman decks, which have swept the interweb and into pro events over the last few months. The deck is RUG, so the name is perfect, and it is also almost the exact same as Mono U Delver, minus two Shocklands for Bridge from Below and Library of Leng. The decks are of course quite different. The deck has a more traditional Stoneforge build where it is very light on lands and plays Aggro oriented strategies such as Quirion Ranger and Sylvan Advocate, usually being its primary in-game win condition. On the other hand, RUG's build is considerably heavier on lands, plays Feint more often, and has a bit more bomb draw in the form of Grafdigger's Cage. Playing aggressively, RUG with full-plays wins essentially is doing a bit of a Mash Up, swapping Grixis Delver's lands for Thragtusk, equipping it with the Grafdigger's Cage (although Thragtusk is a terrible planeswalker). Rather than going into too much detail, let's just discuss the basics of the deck and what has changed since the last article. If it's been a while since you played Modern, if you missed the original article, I would suggest reading that, as there is a lot to catch up with. In addition to being part of the same deck category, as RUG is a Delver shell, most of the general principles apply. Almost all the same principles apply, though the deck is slightly different. First, let's look at Shops in it. I'
