Gas turbine engines are rotary-powered devices that convert thermal energy of combustion gasses into mechanical energy. Known gas turbine engines include a compressor for compressing the intake air and a turbine for producing mechanical energy. Compressed air discharges from the compressor and expands against the turbine to drive the turbine, which, in turn, drives the compressor. Engines used in aerospace applications, as well as other industrial applications, typically include a turbine section having a turbine vane assembly or component that includes a plurality of turbine vanes or blades. The turbine vanes are used to extract energy from the hot combustion gas and transfer that energy to the compressor. Known turbine vanes can include internal cooling passages that allow air bled from the compressor to be channeled across the internal cavities of the vanes and cool the vane surface. However, such cooling air mixes with the hot gases passing through the turbine and can over cool the turbine vane assembly and adjacent non-rotating components. Over-cooling the turbine vane assembly and adjacent non-rotating components negatively affects engine performance and efficiency. Moreover, "flash back" of cooling air that impinges upon the turbine vane assembly causes the cooling air to be redirected away from its intended cooling path.Q: How to properly use a dataobject to save typed objects? So I have a dataobject that is populated from an API call: def self.populate_items items = [] "" At first, this method has a ton of fields, but this dataobject basically only displays 4 fields. So when users click on this in the view, it filters out the fields and creates an object with the 4 fields only. I have a neat API call to get this data that I use to populate this array via.

The effect of anisakid infections on the fecal and serum levels of endotoxins and IL-8 in wild seal (Phoca largha) and harbor seal (Phoca vitulina). Endotoxins are considered the most important antigens eliciting an immune response in the host after exposure to the parasite Anisakis simplex (predominantly A. pegreffii). Infection with A. simplex is considered to be a primary risk factor for the development of inflammatory diseases in humans. The aim of this study was to determine whether some inflammatory cytokines are produced in response to A. simplex infections in animals that are frequently infected with A. simplex. The study was performed on 17 wild seal (Phoca largha) and 20 harbor seal (Phoca vitulina). In both species the parasite was found in the trachea and lung. The experiment was carried out on 4 groups of animals: group I--control; group II--infected with 15 000 A. simplex larvae; group III--infected with 45 000 A. simplex larvae; group IV--infected with 90 000 A. simplex larvae. The total endotoxin contents in feces, serum and allantoin fluid in the infected animals were determined with the limulus amoebocyte lysate (LAL) reagent Occ13bf012
