The influence of some drugs on arterial blood pressure, corticosterone level and on the development of vasospasm in the central nervous system of Wistar rats on 6th, 16th and 26th days after the induction of vasospasm was investigated. Spasm of basal arteries of the brain and spinal cord as well as the impairment of the development of norepinephrine synthesis and metabolism are found. The drugs that normalize blood pressure and do not affect the development of the spasm prolong to death of animals. The blockers of alpha- and beta-adrenoreceptors, the alpha-adrenolytic drugs retard the growth of the spasm and improve survival of animals. It is suggested that the beta-adrenoreceptor modulates the development of the spasm. The data obtained are used to substantiate the hypothesis that there is an interrelationship between the cerebrovascular reactivity and the functional state of the adrenoreceptors system.

This function satisfies the equation
$$V(t) = F(t) f_3(t) + f_4(t), \end{aligned} \quad \text{where } \begin{aligned} f_3(t) &= \frac{\cosh t}{\sqrt{(\cosh^2 t)(1 + \cosh(t))^2 + \sinh^2 t}} + \tanh t \\ f_4(t) &= \frac{\sinh t \cdot \frac{1 - \cosh t}{\sqrt{(\cosh^2 t)}}}{\sqrt{(\cosh^2 t)}} \end{aligned}$$
