1. Field of the Invention The present invention is directed to a process for hydrogenating olefinically unsaturated compounds to produce substantially linear hydrocarbon products, and to a catalyst composition for use in carrying out said process. More specifically, the invention is directed to a catalyst composition comprising a refractory oxide support material impregnated with a lanthanide-containing chloride salt compound and an organic compound having at least one hydrophobic substituent.

2. Description of the Prior Art Hydrogenation of monoolefinically unsaturated compounds to form substantially linear, mono-olefinically unsaturated compounds, i.e., alpha-olefins, is a well known commercial process. Alpha-olefins include, for example, ethylene and propylene, among others. Monoolefinically unsaturated compounds such as ethylene can be hydrogenated to form ethane. Ethane is a valuable chemical intermediate which can be converted into additional ethylene. In commercial hydrogenation processes, ethane is converted to ethylene by the so-called "solution" or the "pressure swing" processes. Pressure swing hydrogenation processes include processes in which gaseous hydrogen is mixed with hydrogenation catalyst in solution form and the resulting solution is circulated through a tube c6a93da74d
