I nodded. "And you trust him?" "Yes." I nodded again. "As long as you do." "Your past is not my business," and I sighed. "Well, maybe you'll need to learn to trust him." She patted my knee and turned away, then I remembered I was supposed to be sad, so I kissed her cheek. "I'll try." She sniffed, and we smiled at each other. I spent the entire journey staring out the window, even when she pulled over to change. "We're in the town now," she said and turned around to say goodbye to me. I looked at her and saw she was looking at my face. I blinked and looked out the window again, really trying not to think about what had just happened. We entered a small town, and I looked at her to see if she was pleased with the chosen location, but she was fighting back tears. She was going to lose her husband now. I knew she wouldn't have a past. We went into a hotel and asked for a room. It was at least clean. I pointed to the bed and the woman shook her head. I shrugged. We carried the suitcases up the stairs,
